A Wildlife Ranger job is highly rewarding, diverse and provides exciting challenges. If you love all forms of native wildlife, want to help protect our native species and be involved with problem animal management then this is the job for you.

Being a Wildlife Ranger requires a high level of motivation, passion and a good level of fitness.

Wildlife Rangers at work
Depending on the region, roles carried out by Wildlife Rangers include:

Wildlife Management
• Taking part in problem wildlife control programs and providing advice to others.
• Providing technical assistance to other departments in regards to feral animal management.
• Monitoring the snake removal hotline, providing the appropriate advice, removal and relocation of the animals as required.
• Monitoring the crocodile sightings hotline and taking appropriate action when sightings or other information is reported.
• Trapping, capturing and removing crocodiles.
• Maintaining crocodile traps and equipment.
• Assisting with sample collections from crocodiles and other wildlife for research.

Law Enforcement
• Assisting in audits on individual and commercial wildlife permit holders.
• Investigating information received in relation to possible criminal activity, unlawful treatment or possession of wildlife.
• Assisting with patrols and compliance duties during Waterfowl Hunting Season.
• Assisting in gathering intelligence through database checks, photographs and any other available means.
• Assisting with warrants, searches and compiling prosecution briefs of evidence.
• Assisting in the formal interview process of suspects and witnesses.

Community Engagement
• Providing information to people, businesses and school groups in relation to native wildlife, pest animals, permits and wildlife crime.

Volunteering
Wildlife Ranger jobs are highly sought after and limited in number with many students undertaking some form of volunteer or work experience in parks, zoos, fire-fighting, tour guiding or other relevant work places before applying for jobs.

Volunteering and/or becoming a member of a “Friends” group is a great way to gain valuable experience and to get a feel for the lifestyle of a Wildlife Ranger.

What does it take to be a Wildlife Ranger in the NT?
• An appropriate tertiary qualification in Natural Resource/Park Management, Conservation and Land Management or a related discipline. If you wish to obtain information on courses, contact a relevant University or TAFE.
• Some field experience in conservation or land management areas.
• Good communication skills.
• Experience in animal handling and identification.
• Current NT Class “C” Driver’s license and a current “Provide First Aid” Certificate (or ability to obtain);
• A good level of physical fitness and willingness to handle wild animals.
